Farm Notes for October. TOBACCO.

The saving of the crop of tobacco should be now finished up at the earli- Profitable vs. Unprofitable Farmest time practicable. Let the tobacco in the house have all the benefit of sun and air that can be given it, but close the doors and windows in wet foggy Instead of unuuring and thoroughly weather, and when the nights are very cultivating fifty acres, we find men exdamp. When fire cannot be used, much damage to the quality of the tobacco of their teams by "putting in" a hunmay be prevented by a little, core in dred and fifty acres. Fifty acres wellshutting up the houses closely, in au- improved will produce four times as ticipation of fogs that are sometimes so injurious. Occasionally during the curing it may be found necessary to close the doors against very tigh winds, which break or braise such parts as are lowing the old routine the next year .-exposed to them. The use of fire in curing the crop quickly has always been, to some extent, practiced. The danger from burning and injury from smoke, when op n fires are used, have deterred planters, in a great measure from its use. In portions of Virginia and North Carolina the wood is now first converted into coal, which is used with safety and Index says, "by concentrating his labor success in curing. In the upper coun- and his tertilizers on a few acres. Land ties of Maryland the line tobacco there is scarce in England, and necessity foregrown is cured in small houses, with ed the adoption of this system before stone flucs made for the firing, which have their openings sometimes on the it was the surest and only reasonable out-ide of the house, and sometimes within. But the furnace for curing, now made by two Baltimore manufacturers, we have no reason to doubt will prove the best and only means of proper accustomed to their own small returns and safe curing by fire. They may be used for wood r coal, give heat enough that can be duly reglated, economize strictly the fuel, are perfectly safe, and get rid of all smell of smoke

All houses for curing tobacco should be provided with ventillation on the top of the roof, to secure a free circulation of the air, so necessary to proper curing. GARDEN NOTES.

Celery .- Continue to earth up celery as the growth advances, but only when the ground is dry, Spinach and other Greens - Keep growing crops of these thoroughly weeded and sufficiently thinned. Seed may still be sown for spring use.

Early Cab age. - rants may be set out after the marale of the month, where they are to stand during the winter -Prepare the ground well by digging and manuring, and if convenient, by off the ridges to run east and west. Let the ridge be well thrown up, and plant about the middle of it on the north side. The plants may be put about a foot apart, to be thinned to haif, for early spring collards.

Cauliflower - Plants of this vegetable should be set in cold frames, as they need the protect on of glass during winter. They may be preserved in this way and set out in the spring when hard froats are over Lettuce .- Plants of hardy sorts may be set out in a warm bold r and a portion in cold frames for early spring use. Ragis.-Take up and secure beets and carrots the last of the month.

FRUIT GARDEN. Gathering Fruit -Continue to gath er fruit as it approaches maturity, observing to do it when fruits and trees S. A. Plummer. are dry, and that it must be done by hand if intended for keeping. Neither pears nor apples should be permitted to get quite ripe on the trees, yet they are not ripe enough to be gathered, until the stem will part from the branch without breaking when gently twisted. Planting Trees -Trees that are to be planted now whenever the ground is in readiness for them-the sooner the better. Apples and pears are better planted in the fall; stone fruits are commonly planted in the spring. Plow at once deeply, and manore, putting the ground in such candition as is required for a crop of eight barrels of corn. In this case there need be little if any mature put immediately around the tree secure a thrifty, healthy, but not excessive growth o' wood. Dicarf Trees .- In the fruit or vegetable garden dwarf trees only should be nor in any case should anything but good compost be used. The ground should be made and kept rich enough to Rapberries, Gooseberries and Currants may now be planted.

Drilling Wheat.

The observation and experience of the best wheat growers throughout the world establishes the fact that wheat properly put in with a drill, will uniformly yield more than that put in by any other known method. In other words, that drilling is the best method of sowing wheat. This fact was established and atmost universally admitted years ago when the facilities for drilling in wheat CONTINUE to give their personal atwere comparatively rule and meomplete. Of course, therfore, the superiority of drilling over all other modes of putting in wheat, is all the more increased now that wheat drills are made next thing to perf at.

The Farmer adds that drilled wheat is imagenety superior in length of stalk, size of head and general thriftiness of plants. There are other benefits as equally great from drilling wheat These are :

1. Saving Seed .- Numberless expe riments have been demonstrated that i requires 25 per cent. less seed to sow an acre in wheat by the drill than it does broadcast. This saving is coursel by the final. drill, depositing the seed with regularity, and at the proper depth to secure Late of Anderson, vegitation. 2. The Increased Growth of Plants -The productiveness of a wheat plant depends on the extent to which it tillers. That is the number of stulks it sends out from one root. This tillering is in creased in drilled wheat, by admitting air-by allowing a larger amount of ground to the support of each plant, by allowing of cultivation, and the casy and dir et application of manure to the crop. Under these influences, the experience of the best wheat growers in the world, has established that drilled wheat will produce 25 per cent. mor than that sown broad cast. But in order that a drill may be used effectively to put in any kind of seed, the ground goust be well broken up and thoroughly pulverized. This fact, we fear, will for some years to come, keep the drills out of general use. In the fulness of time, however, we hope and expect to see a go d seed drill on every respectable farm in the State.

There is no excuse for the breadth of tillage of the poor lands of Virginia .hausting their energies and the strength much as the hundred and fifty that are only partially cared for. Farmers assent to the truth of this, and yet you find them repeating the same and fol-It may sound bigger, but the thing is all in sound.

It is time our farmers should profit by the experience of English husbandmen, who have learned to make money while they pay as an annual rent more per acre than some of our best lands sell for. This he does as the Petersburg agricultural chemistry had proved that method. The reports of the ordinary yield of these snug, well-managed little English farms sound fabulous to our farmers, who have unfortunately been per acre,"-Fredericksburg Herald.
